

UN DOC FESTIVAL HIGHLIGHTS UN SUCCESSES. CHALLENGES

Stories from the Field, The First United Nations Documentary Film Festival begins this weekend, a competition of films from the United Nations. The festival was created so UN agencies and field offices could show American audiences what they do through their own words and images. View the schedule and their lineup here.

The films will spotlight some of the people and cultures in areas with a United Nations presence throughout the world and their challenges overcoming poverty, hunger, disease, civil unrest, trafficking, and injustice. The films will show how the UN is helping communities address these problems and give a voice to UN workers, community leaders, and the people they serve.
